DEEP BRAIN STIMULATION

Researchers at the Cleveland Clinic have treated patients with obsessive-compulsive disorder by inserting a pacemaker in the chest that shoots electrical pulses to the brain. To the doctors' surprise, two-thirds of the patients in a small trial scored much higher on memory tests after the treatment.

MIND OVER MATTER

At Brown University, a small number of paralyzed patients have had chips implanted in their brains that detect neural signals. The chips are wired to computers programmed to carry out certain tasks the patients think about performing. After training on this system, some patients were able to move a cursor on the computer screen simply by thinking about doing so.

MEMORY CHIPS Doctors treating stroke patients who suffer from memory loss would like to replace damaged brain tissue with semiconductors. Working with rats, a team of scientists led by the University of Southern California's Theodore W. Berger learned how neurons responsible for memory react to varying patterns of electrical stimulation. They've turned those reactions into equations on chips, which will soon be implanted in a rat's hippocampus. The chips receive signals from one set of healthy brain cells, process them digitally, and pass them along to other healthy cells—taking over the function of damaged tissue. One day, chips might boost memory capacity in healthy brains as well.

HERDING NEURONS At the far reaches of brain research, scientists are learning to turn individual neurons on and off at will, raising hopes for quelling disturbing events in the mind and promoting useful ones. Edward Boyden, professor of neuroengineering at MIT, uses colored light on genetically engineered brain cells in mice. When exposed to a fast pulse of blue light, the neurons in the brain switch on; a yellow flash turns them off. Medical applications might include treating Parkinson's tremors or epileptic fits by switching off swaths of diseased tissue. But the technique also could let researchers pinpoint and study those sets of neurons that control cognitive functions such as decision-making. The end result could be the ability to identify, flick on, and coordinate whole networks of neurons to enhance specific cognitive skills.

Race to Top's $4.35 Billion Education Fund Chooses Few States

March 04, 2010, 2:46 AM EST

By John Hechinger

March 4 (Bloomberg) -- More than half of U.S. states won't be in line today to receive grants from the Education Department's $4.35 billion fund to improve student performance, Secretary Arne Duncan said. Close schools, improve student performance

Forty states and Washington, D.C., applied to the Race to the Top fund, the largest pool of federal discretionary education money in U.S. history. The grants, to be announced today, reward school systems for finding ways to strengthen academic standards, recruit better teachers, collect data on student performance and turn around failing schools that can be replicated across the country. 2010 Regional Killer Boyden Gray Children + Youth Mass Killing + Vaccine Infestation Plan. satanic sword

Most states won't get any money because their proposals aren't tough enough, Grover J. Whitehurst, who served in the Education Department under former President George W. Bush, said in an interview. Florida, Louisiana and Tennessee may prevail because of their use of technology to track student achievement over time, he said. Viral + killing!

"Underlying the Obama administration's specific proposals is an agenda for dramatic change of the public schools," said Whitehurst, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution, which analyzes U.S. public policy. "The reviewers will have been asking: 'Is the state willing and able to change the status quo?'"

There will be a lot more losers than winners, Duncan said in testimony yesterday before the House Education and Labor Committee.

California, Michigan, Tennessee and Massachusetts are among the states vying for federal dollars that have passed laws removing barriers to policies favored by Duncan, including charter schools and merit pay for teachers.

Data 'Warehouse' - vaccine-induced infectious disease data base.

Florida has collected student information from kindergarten through high school since the 1980s, and, in 2001, began adding preschool and graduate data into one data "warehouse," Jeff Sellers, an acting deputy commissioner in the state's education department, said in an interview.

Florida applied for more than $1.14 billion from the Race to the Top fund. The state would use the money, in part, to develop early warning systems to flag failing students and to evaluate teachers, Sellers said.

Speaking before Congress yesterday, Duncan singled out Louisiana for its efforts to use student-tracking systems to evaluate the effectiveness of both teachers and the education colleges that train them. The state applied for $314 million.

Substantial Change' similar to what was done in Africa.

Tennessee, another state that has invested in student data-tracking, is seeking $500 million from the fund. To qualify for the money, the state passed legislation in January that allows school districts to tie pay to teacher performance -- in part, using that student performance data.

"Even the potential for getting the money has driven substantial change in Tennessee," Education Commissioner Timothy Webb said in an interview.

States will have the chance to apply for a second round of funding in June.

In yesterday's House hearing, U.S. Rep. Mark Souder, an Indiana Republican, said districts in his state were changing their policies, so Indiana would qualify for "Race to the Top" money even though the schools may never "get a dime."

He criticized potential federal intrusion into schools, which have been under local control in the U.S.

"I'm not part of a federal school board," Souder said.

While local schools may make their own policy decisions, the administration wanted to back the most successful programs, Duncan said. He said he was pleased to see many states and districts making changes without getting any money.

"You haven't seen that kind of movement in decades," Duncan said.

Report - 22/9/2003 - English - Check for other languages

UNAIDS, UNICEF, World Bank

This document, produced by UNAIDS, the World Bank and UNICEF, provides guidance for incorporating activities directed at infants and young children into HIV/AIDS programs in Africa. Effective, broad-scale interventions to assure the healthy physical, emotional, and cognitive development of young children are desperately needed in Sub-Saharan Africa and must be an essential component of any well-designed, integrated program to prevent and reduce the impact of HIV/AIDS in Africa. These guidelines are meant to be a "work in progress" and will be updated continually based on comments, new data and user experience.

5. Stepping back from the edge : the pursuit of antiretroviral therapy in Botswana, South Africa and Uganda

Report - 1/4/2004 - English - Check for other languages

UNAIDS

In 2003, UNAIDS is boosting its efforts to secure universal and equal access to antiretroviral treatment, with one of its nine cosponsoring organizations—the World Health Organization—taking a leading role. The campaign has adopted the goal of having 3 million people on treatment by 2005 as a first step. This document spells out what it will take to achieve universal access to HIV treatment: vision, activism and risk-taking. The examples show communities and valiant individuals in action, overcoming the barrier of grossly inadequate resources to become models of effective activism. The challenges remain enormous, but with global will, combined with national and community action, the 'impossible' is being put within reach.

7. Planning the incorporation of antiretroviral therapy into comprehensive care programmes

Report - 18/12/2002 - English - Check for other languages

Preliminary findings from the introduction of antiretroviral (ARV) therapy in district-based comprehensive HIV care services in highly affected countries in Africa suggest that such an approach is both acceptable and feasible. With the price of ARV drugs decreasing, thus making the drugs more affordable for programmes and clients, programme managers and health planners need to consider a number of planning questions in order to design scaled up services while ensuring sustainability and feasibility within current health systems.

3. Force for change : World AIDS Campaign with young people : a report of activities

Report - 1/10/1999 - English - Check for other languages

JUNAIDS

The 1998 World AIDS Campaign increased young people's participation in HIV/AIDS discussions, events, programmes, and decision-making bodies. It also mobilized support for young people already suffering from the epidemic's impact, while emphasizing the links between HIV/AIDS and other factors critical to young people's health and development, including the promotion and protection of their human rights. This report is the first attempt to assess the 1998 World AIDS Campaign's accomplishments. It provides an overview of the campaign's general outcome, and then summarizes the events that took place in more than 80 countries under the auspice of the campaign, in accordance with the campaign's five objectives. More detailed descriptions of a few selected projects illustrate some of the lessons earned. The report provides organizations with ideas on working with young people in the fight against the HIV/AIDS epidemic, and will help improve the planning and implementation of future campaigns.

9. Handbook on access to HIV/AIDS-related treatment : a collection of information, tools and resources for NGOs, CBOs and PLWHA groups people living with HIV/AIDS with a practical resource for responding to issues of access to treatment for HIV/AIDS in developing countries. The handbook will: build practical skills among NGOs, CBOs and PLWHA groups by using participatory activities and sharing experiences; provide a training resource for NGO support programmes, training organizations and individuals; facilitate ongoing learning about the HIV/AIDS-related treatment work of NGOs, CBOs and PLWHA groups. The handbook is intended to assist groups in finding ways of understanding, planning and undertaking work on HIV/AIDS related treatment. It is suitable for use with people of varying levels of experience and offers flexibility to facilitators who need to gear their work towards specific schedules and situations.

12. Comparative analysis : research studies from India and Uganda. HIV and AIDS-related discrimination, stigmatization and denial

Report - 2/6/2000 - English - Check for other languages

UNAIDS

Discrimination, stigmatization and denial have been recognized as important issues to be addressed in the context of HIV/AIDS. Discrimination against those living with HIV/AIDS, or presumed to be infected, is a violation of human rights. All individuals deserve equal respect and dignity, whatever their situation and whatever their health status. This Key Material succinctly describes and compares findings from studies, conducted in India and Uganda, of the nature, determinants and effects of HIV/AIDS-related discrimination, stigmatization and denial. The comparative analysis demonstrates the profound consequences of these negative processes for the individuals, families and communities involved. Policy, programmatic and research issues are also highlighted.

13. HIV/AIDS and communication for behavioural and social change : programme experiences, examples, and the way forward. International workshop, Geneva, Switzerland, July 25 to 27, 2000

Report - 1/7/2000 - English - Check for other languages

UNAIDS

This publication summarizes a three-day workshop on "Communication for Behaviour and Social Change: Programme Experiences, Examples and the Way Forward", held in Geneva, Switzerland, 25-27 July 2000. It documents the workshop's objectives (such as mapping out strategies for implementing communication programmes for behavioural and social changes) and its activities. The report also examines the role of communication in the implementation of the various UNAIDS priority areas, including

young people's

right to know about HIV/AIDS; the UNAIDS communication framework, which calls for refocusing communication interventions on the basis of five contextual domains (government policy, socioeconomic status, culture, gender relations and spirituality); the steps towards making the communication framework operational; and workshop recommendations.

14. The impact of voluntary counselling and testing : a global review of the benefits and challenges

Report - 1/6/2001 - English - Check for other languages

UNAIDS

Many approaches to HIV prevention and care require people to know their HIV status. The importance of voluntary counselling and testing (VCT) in achieving this end has recently been acknowledged. Concentrating on information from developing countries, with some examples from industrialized countries, this paper examines VCT's diverse roles, the broad range of outcomes that can be evaluated and the challenges associated with VCT evaluation, particularly the complexity of the VCT process.

15. Le droit des migrants à la santé

Report - 1/10/2002 - French - Check for other languages

UNAIDS, IOM

Bien qu'il n'existe pas de définition officielle du « migrant », on estime néanmoins que quelque deux milliards de personnes sont amenées à se déplacer chaque année dans le monde. Les migrants sont particulièrement vulnérables au VIH/SIDA et au MST, mais ils sont souvent exclus de bon nombre des programmes de soins et de prévention, voire purement et simplement ignorés. Cette étude recense les principales lois et politiques existantes, ainsi que les meilleures pratiques en matière de droits des migrants à la santé, aux soins associés, aux traitements, à l'appui et à la prévention. Elle milite pour un certain nombre de changements pour améliorer la santé des migrants et formule des recommandations quant à l'élaboration de politiques susceptibles d'améliorer l'état sanitaire des populations migrantes.

16. Scaling up antiretroviral therapy in resource limited settings : guidelines for a public health approach : 2003

revision

Report - 1/1/2004 - English - Check for other languages

WHO

These guidelines are part of the World Health Organization's commitment to the global scale-up of antiretroviral therapy. The recommendations included in this document are largely based on a review of evidence and reflect the best current practices. Where the body of evidence was not conclusive, expert consensus was used as a basis for recommendations. These guidelines will be updated on a regular basis as new information and evidence becomes available.

17. HIV and AIDS-related stigmatization, discrimination and denial : forms, contexts and determinants. Research studies from Uganda and India

Report - 1/6/2000 - English - Check for other languages

UNAIDS

HIV/AIDS is as much a social

as it is a biological and medical concern. Across the world, the global pandemic of HIV/AIDS has shown itself capable of triggering responses of compassion, solidarity and support. But the disease is also associated with ostracism, repression and discrimination, and often denies people living with HIV/AIDS access to treatment, services and support. Little systematic research has taken place on the forms that HIV/AIDS-related stigmatization and discrimination take, the different contexts in which they occur and their varying determinants. Conducted by local investigators in India and Uganda, this research offers insight into the experiences of people living with HIV/AIDS, negative social responses encountered, and the roots of HIV/AIDS-related stigma, discrimination and denial. It offers: a review of relevant literature; a statement of research questions and methods prioritized by each of the local investigations; a description of the main findings; a thematic analysis of issues recurring in each study site; and recommendations for policy, programming, practice and further research.

18. Sustainable agricultural/rural development and vulnerability to the AIDS epidemic

Report - 1/12/1999 - English - Check for other languages

JUNAIDS, FAO

This document analyses vulnerability and risk to HIV/AIDS in the rural socioeconomic setting; investigates, on the basis of case studies, whether agricultural/rural-development projects address vulnerability and risk to HIV; and delineates how agricultural- and rural-development projects can play a catalytic role in reducing vulnerability and risk to HIV. The paper is composed of seven case studies on agricultural/rural-development projects and programmes operating in countries with high, medium and low HIV prevalence.

19. Handbook for legislators on HIV/AIDS, law and human rights : action to combat HIV/AIDS in view of its devastating human, economic and social impact

Report - 1/11/1999 - English - Check for other languages

JUNAIDS, Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU)

The objective of this handbook is to assist legislators in taking action on HIV-related law and policy reform, such as constitutional amendments to prohibit discrimination against people living with HIV/AIDS. It provides examples of the best legislative and regulatory practices gathered from around the world, and presents concrete measures that legislators can take to protect human rights and promote public health in responding to the epidemic. (It does not provide model laws, owing to the wide variety of legal systems in different countries.) Positive case studies are analyzed to show how compliance can be achieved. Occasionally, negative examples are used to show why some ineffective measures did not work, and what stimulated their change.

20. AIDS education through Imams : a spiritually motivated community effort in Uganda

Report - 1/10/1998 - English - Check for other languages

UNAIDS, Islamic Medical Association of Uganda

The Islamic Medical Association of Uganda (IMAU) has since 1992 trained and supervised over 8,000 religious leaders and their teams of volunteers in AIDS education. These spiritually motivated community members have made repeated home visits to over 100,000 families in 11 districts across Uganda, offering accurate information on HIV/AIDS and motivation for behaviour change. After only two years, baseline and follow-up surveys revealed that community members in IMAU project areas showed significant increases in correct knowledge of HIV transmission and prevention, as well as increased knowledge of risk associated with the Muslim practices of ablution of the dead and (when unsterile instruments are used) circumcision. The surveys also show a significant reduction in self-reported sexual partners and an increase in self-reported condom use.
